

Student's Essay after the Winter Camp

Weeks, Memories

During the two-week visiting to Aquinas High School, I can hardly say I learnt much knowledge from textbook (we don't even have one), but we did learn many other things.

I learnt to overcome the procrastination. Since the house is far from Aquinas, we must wake up early in the morning (even earlier than in GZFLS, at 5:30). In general, during the winter vacation, I'll sleep till nearly noon then sluggishly eat, do homework, play the piano, then go back to sleep. However I have no time to waste here. Though we don't have much assignment, I can always find something to do, and of course, without procrastinating.

I learnt several everyday custom here, which is different from China. Like those carpet on the floor, the daily drink: juice and soda (and always cold), those hamburgers and sandwiches. Also, those different classrooms for different lesson, lots of group work, and no delay in class (really appreciate that). What's more, class over at 2:30pm, which gives students a large amount of spare time.

I learnt to serve others. Tonight (Jan. 20th), I attended a banquet for football players. Zoe, Cathy and I helped arrange tables and covers, also pass food to the guests. During the whole three hours, though tired, I enjoyed my work. Every time I heard "thank you" from the guest, I felt joy in my heart. I kind of understand the feeling of waiters and assistants, every appreciation is significant.

I learnt the passion. People here are full of kindness, bounty, friendliness and politeness. Students are always ready to help, host family treat us as their own children, also, every assistants here serve with smile.

Undoubtedly, the two weeks here is significant and unforgettable.

Thank you to all the experiences there and all the people I met here.
